

Fish & Game Assoc. Meet at Innisfail

C. E. Reiber and C. R. Ford represented Didsbury at a meeting of the Fish & Game Associations of central Alberta held at Innisfail on Sunday. Representatives were present from Carstairs, Didsbury, Olds, Innisfail, Red Deer and Rocky Mountain House.

Resolution was adopted asking that the Fisheries Department take steps to spawn Mackinaw trout in Swan Lake and Lock Leven trout in the Raven River and the Dog Pound Creek. It was thought that if this could be done the stocking of the lakes and streams with these fish could be done to better advantage.

A delegation of C. R. Ford, Didsbury, H. Stillfax of Rocky Mountain House and Mr. Christie of Innisfail were appointed to interview the Fisheries Department at Edmonton with regard to this matter.

Will Sell Savings Certificates

The local branch of the Alberta Womens Service Corps have arranged to sell War Savings Stamps and Certificates, and to take wheat pledges from the farmers.

This Saturday evening they will have a booth at Jenkins Groceteria.

Farmers Urged Not to Thresh Damp Grain

Farmers of Alberta were urged to avoid losses which might be incurred by threshing their grain before it is properly dried, in a statement issued today by J. R. Sweeny, Deputy Minister of Agriculture.

The Statement reads: 'Reports have reached this Department that, owing to unfavorable weather conditions, grain is sprouting in the stook and in the swath. In many districts, lower grades will result from these conditions, and losses will be unavoidable. Alberta farmers are urged to use the greatest care in having grain mature before commencing to thresh.

If threshing is resumed before the grain is dry, further trouble will be experienced with heated grain in the bins or at elevators. Farmers cannot handle heated grain on the farm without sustaining heavy losses and the lack of elevator space this year makes it impossible to handle any large volume of damp grain at country elevators or terminals.'

Farmers who are in doubt as to whether their grain is ready to thresh may obtain tests at local elevators to show the moisture content and whether the time is opportune to thresh.

Miss Clarke is a graduate in commerce of the University of Alberta and is affiliated with the Pi Beta Phi fraternity. Lieut. Walker received his degree in dentistry from the University of Alberta, and is a member of the Zeta Psi fraternity.

The wedding will take place in Didsbury on Saturday, October 11, and the bridal couple will make their home in Red Deer, where Lieut. Walker is stationed with the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps.

Five Pounds Is Limit For Overseas Parcels

Tip to Canadians getting ready their parcels of Christmas gifts for shipment overseas: Don't make them more than five pounds apiece.

Post office officials said last night that if Canadians wish their Christmas parcels for friends or relatives in Britain to arrive safely on time, and avoid confiscation under United Kingdom regulations, they must see that parcels weigh not more than five pounds including paper, string and stamps, and be on their way by November 15th.

Soldiers' Mail Lost in August

Advice has been received that a ship which sailed from Canada during the last week in August has been lost at sea by enemy action and a large shipment of mail, which it carried, has been lost. The shipment contained 14 bags of registered mail, 153 bags of letters, 433 bags of news, 946 bags of parcels. Included in this shipment were 1293 bags of mail from the base post office, Ottawa, containing mail for the soldiers overseas.

Persons who sent letters, parcels or other small mail about that time will realize what may have happened to it and should therefore not be surprised if it does not arrive.

Where possible letters and parcels should be duplicated.

Crossfield Airman Injured in Raid

Sergt.-Observer John Carmichael, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Carmichael of Crossfield, who is with the R.C.A.F. overseas, was injured on his first flight over enemy territory, according to a letter received by his parents from Sergt. Carmichael on Wednesday last.

The bomber in which he was the navigator was on a raid over northern Germany, and Sergt. Carmichael was the only member of the crew injured. His crew mates gave him first aid, and he was able to direct the flight home.

According to the letter his wounds were not serious.

Sergt. Observer Carmichael formerly resided in Didsbury.

Cost of Living Bonus Urged For Farmers

Additional government assistance to wheat farmers in the form of a cost of living bonus on 1941 wheat acreage, or by way of grants to families of wheat farmers is urged in a telegram forwarded to Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Federal Minister of Agriculture, by the North-West Line Elevator Association. It is pointed out that raising the price to be paid by the Canadian Wheat Board alone is not sufficient to meet the situation as there are thousands of wheat farmers who will have little or no wheat to market.

A short open season on cock ring-neck pheasants has been announced by the Game branch, Department of Lands and Mines. These planted birds are thriving well in certain sections of the province, and the season will be open on cocks in two sections—in the deep south and an area centered by Edmonton. Sportsmen are asked to co-operate with the Branch and with the Alberta Fish & Game Association by conforming strictly to season and bag rules for these and other game birds. Regulations are obtainable from license vendors and Game Guardians.

The Forgotten Route

There are some peculiar anomalies in connection with what is known as the Hudson Bay route comprising the Hudson Bay Railway and the port of Churchill and its facilities and H. S. Potter, President of the On-to-the-Bay Association, was rendering a public service to the people of Western Canada recently when he drew attention to some of them, and inferentially issued a warning when he said: "Many people in Canada, no doubt, hope that it has joined the limbo of things forgotten. We in the West should see that this is not the case."

When Mr. H. S. Potter wrote the article in which the foregoing quotation appeared he had just returned from participation in the ninth annual Canadian National Railway excursion to Churchill. On that trip, he noted some peculiar things and made some observations on what he saw and heard which not only prove to be interesting but which are of sufficient importance to warrant some heed being paid by those whose interests are vitally affected, the people of the west.

After the outbreak of the war, when it was found that apparently the facilities of the Bay route were not to be used for commercial purposes or for more effective prosecution of the war, apprehension was felt, and expressed in some quarters, that the roadbed might be allowed to disintegrate, the steel rails to rust or be removed for other purposes and the whole system be permitted to run down at heels. Fortunately, this is not the case, for Mr. Potter records as a fact that "the roadbed is in good shape and the passing tracks are being maintained to a high degree of proficiency."

That, and the fact that the 2,500,000 bushels of wheat which has been in storage in the Churchill terminal facilities for a couple of years, is in a state of first class preservation, despite rumors to the contrary, must afford some satisfaction and are matters for congratulation.

Amazed Americans

But what evidently disturbed Mr. Potter and amazed the 188 Americans from 31 States of the Union who made the trip, was the fact that these facilities, which are evidently being maintained in first class condition are not being used and especially at a time when they might naturally be expected to be utilized to relieve congestion in other Canadian ports burdened by heavy war traffic.

When American visitors voiced their surprise that these splendid facilities are not being used, said Mr. Potter, "the only excuse we could find to offer was that officials in charge of ships and convoys would not sanction traffic in and out of the Bay."

Based on what he appeared to regard as conclusive evidence, Mr. Potter is apparently of the opinion that there is no valid reason why timber which is now being hauled from one end of the Dominion to the other for use in Great Britain could not be handled via the Bay route and for the greater part of the year. Incidentally, in submitting his opinion, he explodes the theory still held in the east and perhaps by some people in the west that navigation through Churchill is restricted the greater part of the year by climatic conditions.

"I was given to understand," said Mr. Potter, "that at the present time Great Britain is using a very considerable amount of timber which is being hauled all the way across the continent and shipped from ports that are already highly congested. Officials at Churchill made the positive assertion that such shipments could be handled through Churchill in almost any amount and that such shipments could be continued during the greater part of the winter months."

Should Press Claims

The interesting, not to say informative statement that shipments could be made during the greater part of the winter will, undoubtedly, come as a surprise, even to many in the west who have been sufficiently interested in the development of this $50,000,000 asset to follow its fortunes, or misfortunes, to date. Mr. Potter gives chapter and verse for this assertion in the following words:

"It appears that ice forms in the estuary of the Churchill River some time in the month of November, but if a comparatively small amount of money was spent for a breakwater to deflect this ice from the dredged channel, ships could come up to the docks without any difficulty."

"Even when shore ice would impede the movement of such ships, the assertion was made, that it would be a very simple matter to lay tracks on the ice when timber loading could be continued as long as ships could be navigated through the Bay and the Straits, which, apparently is twelve months in the year."

Perhaps as long as the war is in progress, little can be done, under the circumstances, to encourage use of this short route between Canada and Europe, but the people of the West who fought for these facilities for 50 years and who have paid the bill, will be well advised not to forget its existence and whenever opportunity occurs to press its claims for greater consideration than it is now receiving so that, to quote Mr. Potter, "some day the benefits of this route will accrue to the lasting benefit of the whole of the Dominion of Canada."

To Speed Up Workers

The British government has introduced "pep" methods in a campaign to increase war supplies. Production managers broadcast talks to the workers and posters urging increased output have been tacked to factory walls. A placard in a bomb-filling station read: "You make the best bombs. Our airmen drop them."

Plenty Of Energy Needed

When Postmen Carry Heavy Load Up Flights Of Stairs

According to a report of the medical branch of the British postoffice on stair climbing by postmen in big blocks of flats as cited in the London Daily Mail, a postman's maximum load is 35 pounds. He uses one and a half times more energy per minute going up and down stairs than on the level. One postman climbed 1,449 steps every morning—nearly the height of the Eiffel Tower. An average postman climbs at the rate of 80 stairs a minute—40 up, 40 down. He walks at the rate of three miles an hour—90 yards a minute. Four postmen, the eldest 56 and the youngest 25, were selected for the tests.

Canadian Research

Taking Advantage Of Lessons Learned From The War

Through a vast army of scientific workers on both sides of the Atlantic, Britain is taking advantage of lessons learned under service conditions by her fighting men, Sir Lawrence Bragg, scientific liaison officer between Canada and the United Kingdom, said.

Groups of Canadian experts visit Britain to see how the equipment they have designed stands up under actual war conditions. Similar groups of British experts come to Canada to see the designs and instruments produced here.

"In this way thousands of scientific men have been bound into one great army which spreads from Britain to Canada and over into the United States," Sir Lawrence said. "Production is linked directly with conditions met in the field."

Sir Lawrence said the need for this co-ordination grew out of "the terrible reality that a mistake cannot be made even once."

"No matter how good a weapon or an instrument may be," he said, "if you haven't tried it yourself you will rather use one which you know rather than risk the victory or defeat and the lives of millions of people on the unknown."

That was the situation at the beginning of the war, but it had changed in two years. Canadian research and production had gone ahead so fast and actual results of instruments and weapons in use had been so good that "complete confidence" in Dominion workmanship has gradually grown up.

"Now Britain knows that if Canada says 400 of anything ordered will be ready on a certain date and will be capable of a certain quality and degree of performance, it will be so," he said.

The change was greatly aided by the missions of technical and research experts, both British and Canadian. British experts, "when they see the progress being made in Canada and the actual functioning of ideas which on paper may have appeared inadequate or overrated, they are often amazed," he said. "They go back to make recommendations which might be impossible without this constant contact and consultation."

Keep The Wheels Turning

Tests Go To Show That Chewing Relieves Nervous Tension

Workers, whether in offices, stores, factories, or munition plants, are seeking in these vital days to do more work, better work. Management is quick to adopt ways and means to help employees keep refreshed while on the job. Recent tests made in some munition plants show that chewing gum while working helps relieve fatigue and nervous tension. As a result many industrial plants provide facilities so that employees may have chewing gum available at all times. Recent tests conducted by Wm. Wrigley Jr. Company, Limited, in co-operation with plant management, indicate workers find refreshment by chewing gum while they work, the chewing helping to relieve fatigue and nervous tension.

Medical Missionary Puts South African Witch Doctors Out Of Business

Dr. James B. McCord, medical missionary, has returned to the United States after 41 years of putting South African witch doctors and medicine men out of business.

For many years he made little progress among the Zulu natives because of their superstitions. But when he retired in the fall of 1940 at Durban, South Africa, the people had named after him streets, babies, medicines and a $50,000 hospital.

Mr. McCord established the first hospital for Negroes in the area and was the first to train native nurses and medical aides. A native of Illinois, he will reside with his wife at Oakham, Mass.

The Noise Cure

Unique Method Adopted In Britain To Treat Nervous Troubles

Two R.A.M.C. specialists in psychological medicine at a military hospital write on a topic of general interest in the "British Medical Journal." They have been dealing with cases of neurotic breakdown caused "or in part precipitated by the unaccustomed stress of noises, such as gunfire, shell-bursts, exploding bombs, sirens planes and dive-bombing."

Contrary to what many people may think is the first condition of effecting a cure, they have found that a repetition or imitation of war noises may actually assist the patient back to a sense of composure and control; and that treatment has been successfully applied, first with a portable field siren and "tin boxes and sticks" and later, with the help of the BBC, by the use of gramophone records of actual warfare.

Patients are also reminded by word of mouth of what is an undoubted fact, that other people have grown used to such noises and the experiences associated with them. "Men, women and children in our badly bombed cities have developed a new lease of life. They are in better mental trim than those in safe areas." It is, in short, the unknown that unnerves.—Manchester Guardian.

Naval Strategy In The Pacific Must Be Considered In Terms Of Long Distance

What an American writer once aptly described as the Restless Pacific is much more in the war picture to-day than it has been hitherto. The A B C D nations—America, Britain, China, the Dutch East Indies—control considerable naval forces in that area, even though, as we know from various Admiralty bulletins of recent months, some units of the British-Chinese squadron are now working in the European theatre of war.

Holland and Russia, which are both belligerent nations, have strong squadrons and flotillas of the smaller types of warship in the Far East. The exact composition of the U.S. Pacific Fleet is today a military secret, but it is common knowledge that the Pacific has always been the main centre of American naval concentration, and there is no reason to suppose that diversion of a certain number of ships to reinforce the patrols in the Atlantic has seriously reduced the great fighting strength of the Pacific Fleet.

Naval strategy in the Pacific has to think in terms of great distances. From Hong Kong to Singapore, the two main British strongholds, is a distance of 1,450 miles, or roughly three days' steaming at fleet speed. From Honolulu to Hong Kong is 4,860 miles, or more than ten days' steaming. From Vladivostok, the main Russian base in the Far East, to Hong Kong is 1,700 miles, or 3½ days' steaming.

Those who are accustomed to think of naval warfare in terms of the short distances of the North Sea have to readjust all their ideas when considering the possibilities of operations in the Pacific. The modern warship is so dependent on fuel supply that these distances between possible bunkering points exercise a dominating influence on staff plans. They have led to the development of what is known in some navies as the Naval Train, that is to say, a large fleet of oilers, repair ships and supply ships. This train complicates the problems because it is not self-protective and needs escorts of considerable strength if it is to move anywhere within striking distance of hostile forces.

An American naval officer once, discussing this problem before a professional association, gave the estimate that a U.S. Battle Fleet after steaming from Panama to Manila would need to find in the Philippine port immediate supplies of not less than 250,000 tons of fuel, otherwise it would be immobilized, with a bare 10,000 tons left in the bunkers of all the ships.

To meet this need the American Navy as acquired up to a few months ago some two dozen oilers whose cargo capacity varied from 8,000 to 16,000 tons each. The Dutch East Indies Fleet relies upon chartered vessels for its train, and the British Admiralty has added during the war to the large numbers of oilers previously employed as Fleet Auxiliaries.

The Dutch East Indies Fleet, according to the last published information, included three medium-sized cruisers, seven destroyers, a coast defence ship, fifteen submarines, seven sloops and minelayers, a dozen miscellaneous patrol craft.

The strength and composition of the Soviet Navy in Far Eastern waters are unknown. It is generally believed that at least 100 Russian submarines of all types are out there, and the names of a few destroyers and torpedo boats have occasionally been publicly mentioned. But whatever the material there is one striking difference between the spirit of the Russian Navy to-day and that which dominated the Tsarist ships in the late Russo-Japanese war. Moscow's official bulletins during the last fortnight have contained evidence that both in fighting spirit and in efficiency the Soviet Navy is fully equipped.

It is impossible to say to-day what units of the British Navy are operating in the waters east of Singapore. The fact that the Far Eastern Command is held by a man of the rank and ability of Vice-Admiral Sir Geoffrey Layton is an indication that whatever the calls for ships in other waters, the China Command is still an important one tactically; and official mention has been made in recent months of important reinforcements of the Services in the Far East.

One of the main preoccupations of the British Naval Command in the Far East must be the safety of the merchant shipping moving in the great triangle of waters bounded by Auckland, Hong Kong, and Colombo. Apart altogether from the question of normal commercial traffic, we depend on that area for large quantities of essential war materials which must reach this country to keep the war factories running.

It has been clear throughout the war that any extension of hostilities to the Far East must add gravely to the strategic problem with which the naval staff are constantly grappling. And though the interposition of the American Pacific Fleet in such hostilities would be an immense help, many aspects of the operations would still be solely a British responsibility. (London Sunday Times Naval correspondent.)

Imitation Was Too Good

Italian's Pigeon Call So Real It Brought Disaster

Siro Bernasconi might get a place on a certain popular radio hour as an imitator if he lived in the United States. But, says the St. Thomas Times-Journal, Signor Bernasconi lives in Milan, and in the meantime he is probably in a hospital.

Meat dishes are somewhat scarce in Italy just now. Siro, being quite a bird imitator, thought him of the plan of sitting in a tree and imitating the call of a pigeon so that some of the species might come near him and he could shoot them down and have pigeon pie. It is not recorded that any pigeons went near, but at any rate, Siro's call was so realistic that another man who fancied pigeon pie, and who, like some of our Ontario deer hunters shoot first and investigate afterwards, shot into the tree and killed the pigeon imitator with buckshot.

The art of Siro Bernasconi is in line with that of some famous painters. Velasquez painted an admiral so true to life that when the king entered the studio he reproached the supposed officer for wasting his time there when he was supposed to be with his fleet; like that of the Greek artist Zeuxis who painted grapes so naturally that birds pecked at them, and like the Dutch painter Matrya, who depicted a bee so naturally that another artist inspecting the canvas attempted to brush the bee off.

In the instance Signor Bernasconi did get stung.

Unusual But Official

German Army Report Which Went Astray Is Delighting Australia

From Canberra comes an unusual though official story of how a German army document praising Australian soldiers got into the hands of the Australian Imperial Force. Written by a high German officer as a report from the Western Desert to Berlin, it got side-tracked in the push and is now the delight of the Australian Press Bureau.

Here is what the German officer had to say:

"The Australian is unquestionably superior to the German soldier. In four vital branches of close-quarter fighting the Australian was superior. Fighting to the last, the Australians staked their lives in defence of positions held by them, and lured unsuspecting Germans into easy traps. In every department of close fighting, although the German was more active in attack, the Australian had the edge on the German."

The officers said that the Australian's gift of observation and ability to draw the correct conclusions, his use of individual weapons, particularly in sniping, his technique in the use of available cover and camouflage, and the rapidity with which he could take advantage of surprise were qualities which enabled him to outshine the German.

The report emphasized the excellence of Australian marksmanship and stated as evidence that the protruding sights of German gun directors had been shot off. On occasions, German N.C.O.'s had been shot through the head with the first shot when making observations in the front line.

This is the stuff that warms the heart. Our only regret is that we could not have been looking through the window when Herr Goebbels first read the report in Australian papers granting for purposes of argument that that worthless parrot can read. Ottawa Journal.

Flaxseed Production

Important Machine Used In The Linseed Industry

Flaxseed comprises the most important material used by the Linseed and Soybean Oil Industry of Canada which produced 5,621,246 gallons of linseed oil in 1940 at a value of $1,054,584. Linseed oil is the principal item of the industry's production and accounts for 91 per cent. of the total value of materials used. Of the 2,635,792 bushels of flaxseed used, 1,513,978 bushels were of Canadian origin. Linseed oilcake, linseed oilcake meal, linseed meal, soybean products (oil, meal, flour), and soap are among the other products by the industry which had nine plants operating in Canada in 1940. Four of these plants were in Quebec province; two in Ontario; two in Manitoba, and one in Alberta.

Historic Invasion Of Russia By Napoleon And Hitler Presents Strange Parallel

Two historic invasions of Russia from Western Europe, one by Napoleon and one by Adolf Hitler, present a remarkable parallel.

1. Napoleon attacked Russia on June 24, 1812. Hitler attacked on June 22, 1941. Both expected to win a complete victory before autumn.

2. Napoleon and Hitler both had conquered most of Europe with the exception of Great Britain. Both were baffled by British sea power.

3. Both Hitler and Napoleon had had treaties of expediency with Russia, which they violated when the time was ripe.

4. Hitler, with a two-day start and the advantage of mechanized equipment, entered Smolensk in mid-July. Napoleon did not get that far until mid-August.

Russia was the beginning of the end of Napoleon. It led to Waterloo and the triumph of Britain. The Russian winter and the Russian tactics of retreat, counter-attack, guerrilla fighting and "scorched earth" policy combined to defeat Napoleon in 1812. The Russians are using the same tactics in 1941.

In 1812 Napoleon was riding high. He had conquered three-fourths of Europe and was out to destroy Britain.

Then, as now, British sea power barred the way to a direct assault on the islands.

There was no air warfare then.

Napoleon had to decide the issue on the continent, just as Hitler is trying to do now. The continental blockade of British trade was Napoleon's weapon. To make the blockade complete, he found it expedient to subdue Russia. He had no relish for the difficult Russian campaign, but he deemed it essential for the destruction of Britain.

There was an incongruous alliance between Napoleon and Czar Alexander, but both were aiming against each other.

In the present war the same situation existed. Hitler bought Russia off with a non-aggression treaty. Russia gained time nearly two years, as it turned out, to prepare against the German attack.

This time she was able to fling defensive outposts into the Baltic states and Poland to step the crest of the wave before it reached Russia.

Napoleon called his invasion a crusade against Russian imperialism. He was the defender of the freedom of the European nations, including Poland, which he had conquered, against Russian aggression. Czar Alexander said he was the champion of the nations subjugated by France.

Hitler raises the banner of a crusade against Bolshevism, while Russia presents herself as the defender of freedom against Nazi aggression.

One departure from the parallel is that in 1812 the United States declared war on England not to aid Napoleon but to defend the freedom of the seas. In this war, the United States is aiding England and Russia too.

Napoleon raised a "grand army" of perhaps 600,000 to 650,000 men in part recruited from Prussia, Austria, Italy and other conquered nations.

The grand army crossed the Niemen River into Russia on June 24, 1812. This horse and foot army entered Smolensk in mid-August and reached Moscow Sept. 14, where cold and hunger awaited his "grand army." His communications were over-extended. He couldn't feed his men and the Russians had "scorched" their Russian earth. Napoleon deserted his army in mid-November. Only a few thousand even saw France again.

The Nazis have tacitly admitted that a winter campaign is in prospect. According to a BBC broadcast the Hamburger Fremdenblatt, in comparing this campaign with Napoleon's, said Napoleon blundered in not stopping at Smolensk and waiting for spring. As far as developments indicate, Hitler is prepared to go ahead despite the onrush of winter.

Napoleon's losses were estimated at 250,000 dead of wounds, disease, hunger, and cold; 100,000 captured and 100,000 missing. Russian losses were placed at 200,000.

Russia claims that Hitler's losses to date are 2,500,000 including 1,000,000 killed.

On A Business Basis

British Government To Put New Pep Into Propaganda

The British government has finally made up its mind to put its propaganda to work in enemy countries on a businesslike basis in an attempt to match the efficiency of Nazi Propaganda Minister Dr. Joseph Goebbels.

During the first two years of the war this work was carried out by a number of different agencies, which overlapped and often conflicted with one another. Now it has been decided to organize the directorate of political warfare, which will have absolute control over everybody concerned and in addition, will have the services of some real experts. The members of the directorate will include representatives of the foreign office, the ministry of economic warfare, the ministry of information, and the British council.

If the plans work out, such organizations as the British Broadcasting Corporation, the war office, the admiralty, the air ministry and other units will be forced to toe the line and co-operate.

Disliked Being Hindered

But Liverpool Dockhands Did Not Know Who Visitor Was

Peter Fraser, the Prime Minister of New Zealand, is one of the friendliest of the distinguished visitors who have recently visited Britain. A BBC broadcast described an amusing incident that took place when he visited the Liverpool docks. At one dock New Zealand lamb was being unshipped into weighted railway wagons. A photographer insisted on posing Mr. Fraser for a picture, holding a frozen carcass of lamb in his arms and surrounded by dockers.

The dockhands, having no idea who their visitor was, complained strongly about the stoppage in unloading. The complaints of course stopped like magic as soon as they were told his identity.

Far from being offended, Mr. Fraser was delighted. "Good they should grumble," he told the reporters afterwards. "I have heard allegations about inefficiency. There may be some, but I have not seen it; these men desire only to get on with the job."

"Pay As You Go"Canada's War Effort

Canada's "pay as you go policy of financing the war as far as possible is providing between 70 and 80 per cent of the total cost, Finance Minister Halsey said recently at Saskatoon in opening the Fall campaign on behalf of War Savings. To bridge the balance, the Government is appealing to the people for savings and loans.

The willingness of the Canadian people to make sacrifices in order to finance the war was the first of four major developments since the outbreak of war listed by the minister. The other three developments are:

The sharpness with which the issues of war have been defined. The co-operation of the United States; And, the inspiration of the heroism of the British people.

Speaking of the clarification of war aims, Mr. Halsey declared the war has become a war between the principals on which the opposing nations are founded.

"The German Empire has adopted and practices evil as a matter of principle. The Nazi philosophy if such it can be called, repudiates the Christian ethics, having no use for mercy, brotherhood, equality and the like. It repudiates the scientific spirit, not permitting the free pursuit of truth when the conclusions reached would be injurious to the gang that rules the state. And it repudiates the rule of law, substituting for it the capricious decrees of the dictator."

"The issue has become 'We' or 'they'." Mr. Halsey said. "If Hitler wins it would be vain to hope that if we stood aloof we could find safety in isolation. Too many nations have already lost everything by failing to enter the common struggle until it was too late."

The simple, civilized aims of the eight point declaration framed by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt formed a secure base for all those opposing Hitler's aggressions.

"How thankful we should be that these elected leaders of the two great nations should be able to agree on this positive and progressive declaration of principles."

Red Cross Notes

Here has come to us a clipping from a local English newspaper, which is headed "Canadian women's Gifts" and reads as follows:

"Have you noticed the beautiful quilts on display in our local shop windows? They are very fine examples of the art of patchwork and quilting, now almost a lost art in this country. These are only two of scores of quilts sent by the women of Canada for the relief of war distress. Those who have worked in the rest centres, among people who have lost everything in air raids, can best appreciate the value of these gifts for shortage of bedclothes presents one of our greatest difficulties there. When one considers that the quilts are made entirely by hand, and that each represents hours and hours of patient labour, one begins to realize the loving thoughtfulness that prompted the givers. The knowledge that our Canadian sisters willingly spend so much time and labor on our behalf not only awakens our deepest gratitude, it inspires us anew with hope and courage."

Petrified Buffalo Heads Found Near Crossfield

While digging in a creek on his farm, W. W. Stafford unearthed ten buffalo heads which had turned to stone. One is on display in the window of the Chronicle and is attracting considerable attention.

The petrified skulls were under about 14 feet of earth and in a cluster. — Crossfield Chronicle

Husband: "I think it's partly because these War Savings Certificates are so simple to buy."

Wife: "You mean the idea of getting the office to deduct a regular amount each week from your salary?"

Husband: "Yes! And how they're mounting up! Quite a nest-egg when you count the interest they're earning."

The help of every Canadian is needed for Victory. In these days of war the thoughtless selfish spender is a traitor to our war effort. A reduction in personal spending is now a vital necessity to relieve the pressure for goods, to enable more and more labour and materials to be diverted to winning the war. The all-out effort, which Canada must make, demands this self-denial of each of us.

The World of Wheat

By H. G. L. Strange

One hundred and twenty-eight years ago this very month Napoleon, at the head of an immense army of 610,000 veterans entered Moscow on September 14th as a great conqueror and left it a defeated and broken man on October 19th.

Napoleon was defeated simply because he had taken a long chance, contrary to his usual practice and it had failed him. He gambled on finding sufficient food for his grand army in Moscow, but during those fateful 35 days the Russians, refusing to meet him in battle, adopted the "Scorched Earth" policy and burned all the food in Moscow and the surrounding countryside, and so Napoleon's grand army, which for years had made all Europe tremble retreated in headlong flight back to Paris in a mad race against starvation and by December 12th only 4,500 remained.

It is well to remember all this in order to appreciate in its proper high light the wonderful contribution which our Canadian farmers have made towards the winning of this war by making a great surplus of wheat available, which at least is a good assurance that our allied armies will never have to retreat because of the lack of food.

Following factors have tended to raise price: European crops have been reduced by adverse weather conditions by about 30 million bushels -- Limited amounts of food may be allowed into Greece to relieve the acute shortage there -- Ontario may have to import about 30 million bushels of feed grains from the West this year.

Following factors have tended to lower price: 1941-1942 Australian wheat crop has been estimated at 160 million bushels; up 78 million from last year -- Canadian overseas shipments have declined considerably from midsummer high levels -- Mr. Morgenthau of the U.S. Treasury Department has advocated increased acreage allotments.

The Plight of The Western Wheat GrowerA Suggestion to Lessen His Plight.

The wages now paid to industrial workers are higher than they have ever been in history. In addition such workers are receiving cost of living bonuses.

Farmers producing livestock products are reasonably well off, but the Western wheat grower, who depends mainly or entirely on wheat for his income—and there are many such—is in a bad way. The price of wheat is considerably lower than it was even in 1913-14, and farm costs of living and production have gone up 46% since 1913-14, up 12% since the beginning of the war, besides the amount of wheat the wheat grower can market being curtailed by government regulation. The wheat producer, too, gets no cost of living bonuses, yet he neither strikes nor stops production, nor "slows down."

Considering the extreme difficulties under which the Western producer is laboring, he is entitled, we suggest, to the most sympathetic consideration and to additional and special assistance from the government; for by producing a large reserve of wheat our wheat growers have made a signal and valuable contribution towards the winning of this war, and moreover have provided the means of feeding eventually the war-stricken people of Europe when Peace comes once again.

In view of all this, therefore, we recommend to the Dominion Government that our wheat growers should at least receive a bonus that will compensate them for the 12% increased cost of living and production that has occurred since this war started, and which bonus industrial workers throughout Canada are actually now receiving. This would mean a bonus of approximately 10c a bushel for all the wheat farmers have already delivered, or will deliver, from this current crop.

The payment of this bonus, by means of a flat sum per bushel, would not disturb markets, nor contract entered into for the purchase and sale of wheat; such a bonus moreover would have little effect upon inflation.

Youth Training

During the past four years thousands of young men and women in the prairie provinces have had an opportunity to take special courses in agriculture and domestic science through the Dominion-Provincial youth training programme. The programme will again operate this fall and winter, when similar courses will be held at rural centres in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The youth training programme is financed jointly by the Dominion and Provincial Governments. Details of organization and arrangements for instruction are left to the Provincial authorities. Because of this, the procedure varies somewhat from province to province, but the general objective is the same. That is, to provide an opportunity for worthy and needy rural young men and women between the ages of about 18 and 30 years to attend courses of the kind mentioned above, in or near their own communities. The first schools of the season generally commence about November 1st. Applications for courses must be sent in by the communities interested. Before the application can be filed, naturally some preliminary organization work must be done so that the authorities can be assured of a certain minimum attendance, and a suitable building in which to conduct the course.

Applications for courses in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta should be sent to, and more complete details of the courses offered and the arrangements which are to be made by the local community may be secured from: Director, Extension Service, Manitoba Department of Agriculture, Winnipeg; Director, Department of Extension, University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon; Director, Department of Extension, University of Alberta, Edmonton.

Agriculture the "Poor Relation"

1. That the initial payment by the Wheat Board should be increased to $1 a bushel for One Northern wheat at the terminal.

2. That the stocks of wheat represented by the carryover as at July 31st, 1941, should be taken off the market and held as a national emergency war reserve.

3. That, as from August 1st, 1941, all sales of wheat should be credited to the crop year 1941-42.

4. That the crop year 1941-42 should be declared an emergency year under the terms of the Prairie Farm Assistance Act, irrespective of market prices prevailing.

The above four requests were made by a delegation representing the western Wheat Pools, which on August 9th, interviewed the Wheat Committee of the Federal Government.

The delegation pointed out that principally because of the short crop, the farm revenue from wheat produced in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be approximately $90 million less than last year, and this in face of continually rising farm costs.

The delegation compared the government's wartime wage policy with its agricultural policy. From the government's viewpoint wage rates are fair and reasonable if they are as high as the highest rates paid between 1926 and December 16th, 1940. If farmers were treated on the same basis, the prices of grain would be as follows:

Wheat, per bushel . . .	$1.60
Oats, per bushel69
Barley, per bushel90
Rye, per bushel . . .	1.35
Flax, per bushel . . .	3.00

If Canadian unity is to be maintained, the Wheat Pool memorandum pointed out, and we are to reach our maximum effort in the successful prosecution of the war, the great disparity between agricultural and labor policy must be eliminated. "We would urge upon the government of Canada that the farm producers, who form such a large part of our population, should not be regarded as the "poor relation of the Canadian family, and that it is in the national interest that steps should be taken to place the living standard of those engaged in farming on a basis commensurate with the rest of the country.

"We realize fully the necessity of maintaining our war industries at the highest possible pitch of efficiency, and that in order to reach this workers should enjoy fair and reasonable wage rates. We know of no foundation upon which the principal can be established that agriculture should continue to produce supplies at prices below cost of production in order that other groups of our population, which are already protected by cost of living bonus regulations, should enjoy a lower cost of living at the expense of agriculture.

In this memorandum we have not tried to emphasize the unrest, dissatisfaction and anxiety now prevailing in the western provinces, largely as a result of lack of adequate farm revenue to maintain reasonable living conditions. At the same time we would like to emphasize that, in spite of conditions at present prevailing, there are neither strikes nor lockouts in the agricultural industry."

Wheat producers of Alberta should clearly understand what is being done to help their cause. Their organization can go far. Further progress can be made only by the whole-hearted and energetic support of the whole body of farmers.

Solved His Problem

Jimmy Engler, a service station operator in New York, has solved the gasoline problem so far as his personal consumption of fuel is concerned. He has equipped his car with a tank for kerosene and a small auxiliary tank of gasoline. The gasoline, he says, is used only for starting the motor. Once started, the gasoline line is turned off and the car operates on kerosene.

Leather Coats For Seamen

Word comes from Toronto that leather coats for the seamen are urgently needed for men on the trawlers and minesweepers, destroyers and battleships will need warmth against the penetrating cold of the Atlantic again this winter.

Man first reached the New World by crossing Bering Strait, according to some scientists.

DEADLOCK IN COMPETITION

A flip of the coin finally decided a 36-hole deadlock for Wilder H. Ripley (left) of Calgary and Pasadena, Calif., and S. R. Howard (right) of Lethbridge, Alta. They tied with 74's for the Edward Prince of Wales cup at Banff's 12th golf tournament, played off on another 18 holes and both shot 79's. Miss Christine Gawne, of Washington, D.C. (centre), tossed the coin which decided the cup in Ripley's favor. Ripley's play, incidentally, was a highlight of the Banff Springs Hotel event. He became the first player ever to break Banff's tough par in tournament play, scoring a one-under-par 70 in the quarter-final round. Canadian Pacific photo.

How Hitler Rules

System Followed In Germany And Occupied Countries Is Described

How does Hitler keep a tight grip on the 80,000,000 Germans in the Third Reich and the 200,000,000 non-Germans in the occupied countries? Heinz Soffner, former Vienna journalist, tries to answer this question in the Survey Graphic.

In Germany proper, Mr. Soffner says, the Nazi grip is gained by growing bureaucracy. Within the last three years more than four million government officials have been added. These extended down to the block leader who has direction over the half dozen families in his neighborhood. There is a party official for every state office.

In the average German city the local Nazi organization sees that the party line is followed. Otherwise the mayor rules absolutely. There are no city councils, no assemblies, no public hearings.

In every Nazi court there are two legal judges and one party judge. In the Nazi foreign office Joachim von Ribbentrop represents the government. Alfred Rosenberg represents Hitler personally and Gauleiter Bohle represents the Nazi party.

In Germany the Nazi high command strives constantly to rule the minds and hearts of the German people. It wants them to be satisfied and contented. Outside Germany the Nazis have no such care. The occupied countries are governed by "Quislings" regimes supported by hordes of Gestapo agents, spies, trade and labor battalions. More than 3,000,000 former residents of the occupied states have been taken inside Germany to work at various jobs. To these are added more than 3,500,000 prisoners of war. Every occupied country pays heavy indemnities to support Nazi organizations.

Hitler has reached no permanent settlement, writes Mr. Soffner, with these conquered territories. When and if he completes his activities as a conqueror possibly some new type regime will be established.

In the meantime he is finding more and more difficult the task of keeping conquered peoples under his thumb. Hatred of Hitler and the Nazi grows with each day the war continues.

A Modest Request

Actor Thought Lincoln Might Help Him To Realize Ambition

A compliment by Lincoln to an actor turned out rather awkwardly. This actor had played the part of Falstaff so well that Lincoln sent the actor a brief note of praise. One evening Mr. Noah P. Brooks, the President's companion, observed the actor in the President's waiting room. When Brooks came in, Lincoln asked him if anyone were outside, and upon receiving the answer, said, "Oh, I can't see him! I can't see him! I was in hopes he had gone away. Now this illustrates the difficulty of having pleasant friends in this place. You know, I liked him as an actor, and that I wrote to tell him so. He sent me a book, and there I thought the matter ended. He is a master of his place in the profession, I suppose, and well fixed in it. But just because we had a little friendly correspondence, such as any two men might have, he wants something. What do you suppose he wants?" He paused. "Well, he wants to be consul at London!"

Bacon From Windsor Castle

Members Of Royal Household Have Their Own Pig Club

Windsor Castle will be producing its own bacon soon. Like patriotic citizens up and down the country, members of the royal household have formed their own pig club—the 1,000th club to be registered with the National Pig Breeders' Council. And they have found a new use for scraps from the castle. They go straight to the pigs and form their main feed. Each member paid $5 subscription and between them they now own 52 pigs. The royal family has shown great interest in the pigs since they arrived. Sir Ulick Alexander, keeper of the privy purse and financial secretary to the King, is the chairman of the club. Mr. Ritchie, who manages the royal farm at Windsor, bought the pigs and looks after them. They are middle whites and large whites, selected as being excellent "baconers."

NATIONAL HEALTH

That Canada is not alone in demanding a house-cleaning in the matter of national health, was pointed out by a official of the Health League of Canada. Coincidentally, he declared, voices were being raised in the United States calling for greater attention to the physical stamina of its people.

Dr. Victor G. Heiser, author of "An American Doctor's Odyssey," was said to be a leader in this movement for American health, and his latest book, "Toughen up, America!" was said to be having a strong effect in awakening the public to the need for health conservation. Dr. Heiser was quoted as declaring: "The Physical stamina of a people is as important in armament as cannon."

The Health League spokesman declared that his organization heartily endorsed Dr. Heiser's assertion that attention should centre on disease prevention rather than on cure and quoted further from the American doctor to show what preventive methods could effect.

Dr. Heiser was the director of a $300,000 fund donated to Halifax, N.S., by Massachusetts after the Halifax disaster during the last war. He found eight groups eagerly supporting a separate plan—one for a tuberculosis sanatorium, one for a home for the blind, etc. Dr. Heiser told them to quote his own words: "What you really need is a modern health department, to bring about compulsory vaccination and prevent another outbreak of smallpox... adequate garbage disposal... pasteurized milk... child welfare... an efficiently chlorinated water supply, and all the other essentials to prevent and control disease."

His advice was taken, he states, and subsequently: "The results of the diversified health program were spectacular. In five years the death rate was cut from 20.1 to 11.7 per 1,000 of population, and the infant death rate from 187 to 97 per 1,000. Nearly 2,480 people were alive who would otherwise have been dead."

Economic Stress

Married Man Maintains Morale Better Than The Single Men

Married men, so far as their morale is concerned, can stand economic stress better than bachelors.

And, when times are tough, married men with several dependents seem to have a more cheerful outlook on life than those without such responsibilities.

These conclusions were reported to the American Psychological Association by Prof. Goodwin Watson, of Teachers' College, Columbia University, New York. He based them on the attitudes of 539 unemployed men studied by the adjustment service in New York during the uncertain days of January and February, 1934.

Two yardsticks to measure their morale were used. One was designed to measure occupational morale, stressing ambition and the belief that one gets ahead by hard work rather than by "luck or pull." The other, a life satisfaction index, compiled by Prof. Watson, included the liking for people and various kinds of activities, tough mindedness which prevents worrying over minor failures or slights, and freedom from grrouches, nervousness, fears and unhappiness.

Prof. Watson said that it was found that morale, in the sense of life satisfaction and faith that effort counts, will be better maintained not only by men of families, but by those who are religious, those who hold offices in several organizations, and those whose work is teaching, writing, selling or in executive positions.

DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

CHAPTER XXIV.

In the dingy safety of her own room again, Devona paced the floor nervously. Still frightened by her close brush with the danger she knew hovered behind Macias' thinly veiled threat, she tried to sort out her thoughts. She'd have to decide right now which way to turn.

Knees trembling, she sagged into a little heap on the bed. If she could play the game for just another 24 hours, maybe she could discover something Dale needed to know. As it was now, her suspicions were just suspicions. And no one was in so good a position to find grounds for those suspicions as she was.

Slowly, a plan formed in her mind. First, she must call Talbot, exact of him a promise not to return to El Mexicano. Trembling, she reached for the phone, gave the number.

"But why not?" Tal demanded immediately, his voice sharp with concern.

"I can't explain now. But please take my word for it. It's dangerous—for you," she said, her voice lowered as if she half-expected that Macias stood listening at her elbow right now. "I'll see you Saturday evening after the show."

"Look here. I don't like this—" "Please, Tal. It's all right. But Macias has taken a dislike to you for some silly reason and it—it would just save me embarrassment if you didn't come back for a while. It's silly, I know. But I promise to see you Saturday."

"Promise?"

"Yes, yes. I promise."

"Until then—"

Until Saturday. Trembling as if with a chill, Devona replaced the receiver, sat staring at the cold lump of metal blinding. Forty-eight hours until Saturday. What could happen before that! And why was she risking all this? Why not run now while she had the chance?

Because, instinct told her, the man she loved was in danger. Serious danger. And this might be a way to save his life. The man she loved—

Dropping onto the bed again she lay quivering like some hunted animal—too distraught to find comfort in tears, too weary to fight her way free of the despair that pressed against her heart. Life was such a mess!

DEAFNESS IS MISERY

Fog hovered just outside the window the next morning when she finally roused from dreams and came back to her problem. And by the time she'd dressed, swallowed scalding black coffee in the dreary dining room downstairs, she had a plan. Or at least the beginning of one.

Manuel was surprised to see her arrive at the club so early.

"Well—how come you honor our rehearsal with the sunshine of your smile, sister?" he grinned as she crossed the empty dining room to the platform.

The Troubadours rehearsed for a couple of hours, usually, before Devona joined them. But to-day she unrolled some new music, set it on the rack.

"I'm tired of the little ditties we've been doing lately and I heard these last night. How do you like them?" she fabricated quickly.

And then while Manuel and the Troubadours were trying out the new songs, fitting parts in harmony, making a cacophony of sound even over the scraping of chairs and the sloshing of mops as the scrubwomen cleaned the room around them, Devona kept her eye on the door to Macias' office.

"The boss here yet?" she asked, casually.

Manuel nodded. "He'll be along, though. Why?"

"Nothing. Just wondered."

Carefully she covered her wandering away from the platform by pulling off her hat and jacket, pretending to start for her own dressing room. Then, when one of the charwomen inserted a passkey into the lock of the gray-paneled door, Devona smiled at her brightly.

"Going to give the boss' domain a little polishing?"

"Sure, Miss, and you should see it when I get through," the old Irish woman grinned, toothlessly.

And while Devona was still wondering how she could manage it, the woman turned, picked up her pail, added,

"There now. I've gone and left my brushes down in the kitchen. Must be losing my head."

And still grumbling to herself, the cleaning woman closed the door again, set down her pail, ambled off down the hall.

What a stroke of good luck. Devona drew a deep breath, glanced quickly up the hall. If by any chance, the door latch had not been re-locked!

Fingers like ice, she tried it. The door was unlocked!

The next instant she was inside. Macias' dark eyes seemed actually to be staring at her from the portrait as her fingers stumbled around the elaborately carved gold frame, searching for the little, hidden button. And when the picture swung back against the wall, her memory dictated to her numb fingers—around three times, back twice, around again, back half way—as she spun the dial.

Her heart seemed to stop as the heavy door swung open. She'd done it! Then her eyes widened. Except for the fan and mantilla and carved, jewelled comb she'd seen Macias put in there only last evening, the safe was now empty!

A footstep in the hall outside jarred her back to her senses. The cleaning woman would be back. It would be hard to explain why she had invaded the forbidden ground. No employees was allowed in Macias' office without good reason. Every one knew that.

She closed the door quickly, replaced the picture. Then, as she turned back to the door, terror took real hold of her. The voice outside was Macias'.

For a moment, she stood as if poured into a mold. Was she caught already! Then she remembered the secret panel. Crossing the deep-carpeted room, pressing the little panel aside, closing it again—it was a matter of a moment. And she'd scarcely stepped into the little passageway beyond when she heard the door outside open. Macias was saying,

"Never mind now, Nora. I'm busy. You can clean here later."

Then the sound of the door closing, the key turning in the latch. Scarcely daring to breathe for fear she'd betray her hiding place, Devona pressed against the wall, motionless. She heard Macias cross the room, scrape back a chair. A moment later, he gave a telephone number—his voice lowered so that she had to strain to hear.

"Hello. Hello! That you, Joe?" Listen. I delivered the stuff all right, but the cops are getting wise. Now get this straight!

"Tell Sam I'll pick up the new batch myself. Tell him to call me direct as soon as it's in. Get that?"

A pause during which Devona heard the rasping crackle of a voice over the wire.

"Saturday you think? O.K. I'll be expecting your call. Right. 'By."

Devona waited until she heard him hang up, begin opening and closing desk drawers, moving restlessly around the room before she stole silently down the narrow corridor to the outside door. If it were locked from the inside as well as —

Her breath escaped in a little sigh. It wasn't. Carefully, she opened it, glanced up and down the alley, closed it noiselessly behind her. She'd made the first hurdle, she congratulated herself as she sped down the alley toward the club's rear entrance. And made a beginning, too, in her search for evidence. That message Macias would be expecting sometime Saturday, that "new stuff"—if she could find out something about that —

Head down against the stiff wind that had sprung up, she hurried around the corner. Bumped squarely into some one.

"Hello!" It was Joe—Macias' chauffeur.

"Oh—hello." And tried to laugh around her guilty confusion. "Fancy meeting you here."

He glanced over her shoulder, down the length of the deserted alley. "What's up?"

Desperately, Devona called out her wits. What a stupid blunder. What reason could she give him for her being in the alley at 11 in the morning when he knew as well as she that she didn't even go on duty until afternoon. Smiling, she shrugged.

"Come down for extra-early rehearsal. Foul morning, isn't it?"

And, ignoring his puzzled glance at her, and perfectly aware that being hatless and coatless didn't help her story any, she ran on into the side entrance. Once safely inside again, she slipped through the busy kitchens, down the step to her own dressing room.

Had she bungled that hopelessly, she wondered frantically as she slipped out of street clothes into a costume. What if Joe went right to Macias, mentioned, either accidentally or purposely, having found her racing along the alley at this hour!

What if, later, Joe happened to remember seeing her there!

Shrugging the ruffled satin into place, Devona dropped down before her dressing table, began applying the rouge, the eyeshadow, the heavy powder that was part of her mask. Probably Joe wouldn't think of it again. She tried to believe that. Just a casual meeting—she was oversensitive, too apprehensive. Anyway—and she tried to shrug aside mounting fears—she had to take the chance.

Because to-morrow she had to find a way to try again.

Manuel was shouting her name as she left her dressing room, made her way back to the rehearsal.

"Hey, there. Ready to try this one now?"

She nodded, skirted the stacks of chairs, tables, went quickly to the platform. But not so quickly but that she met Macias.

Scowling, he looked at her. "What are you doing down here at this hour—and all dressed?"

She shrugged a smile at him. "Some new songs to rehearse. I thought I might as well get ready while I was waiting for Manuel."

Her heart hammered so loudly against her throat she thought surely he must hear it, detect the tremor in her voice. But, apparently he didn't. He only nodded his scowl still deep.

What The Book Said

The phrase books from which the middle class Japanese gain their knowledge of English are often responsible for amusing mistakes. For instance, a Japanese guide who had learned his English from a guide book greeted a visiting tourist courtously one day with: "Good morning, Sir or Madam, whichever the case may be!"

BRAN BROWNIES ARE LATEST COOKIE NEWS

There are fashions in cookies just as there are fashions in hats. The latest is Bran Brownies—a delectable combination of chocolate, nuts and crisp crunchy bran. While it belongs in the cookie class it's a first cousin to fudge. The makings are as follows:

Bran Brownies

3 squares unsweetened chocolate (3 oz.)
1/2 cup butter
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
2/3 cup flour
1/2 cup bran
1/2 cup chopped nut meats
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Melt chocolate and butter over hot water. Beat eggs well, add sugar and continue beating until light and fluffy. Add chocolate mixture. Stir in flour, bran, nut meats and flavoring. Pour into greased baking pan, making layer about one-third inch thick. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 25 to 30 minutes.

Yield: Sixteen 2-inch squares (8 x 8-inch pan). Variation: 1/2 cup cocoa may be substituted for chocolate. Omit chocolate and sift cocoa with flour. Melt shortening and add to egg and sugar mixture.

Carrier Pigeons

Find That Falcons Kill Birds Carry-Ing Messages

The air ministry has declared war to the death on the peregrine falcon—the slayer of carrier-pigeons.

The predatory activities of these "fifth columnists" of the British air might well have led to secrets of vital national importance being found by the enemy in the nesting places of these birds in the cliffs of Solway.

Every day now in the Solway district of Dumfries and Cumberland, raiding parties go out to destroy the birds.

Since the war began, carrier-pigeons have been doing important work for the R.A.F. Lately, men in authority were worried by the non-arrival of some of these birds, and the loss of messages which might have played an important part in the air conflict.

Investigation showed that the birds were not shot down by Nazis but were killed by falcons which are numerous along certain shores of Britain.

Since the discovery, scores of falcons have been killed.

Just outside Nanking, China, is a wayside temple where persons may get "milk" from a well. Said to be more than 500 years old, the well produces a sweet liquid the color of milk.

TO PAY YOUR 1941

Income Tax

on the Government Monthly Plan
You must start at once!

Next Tuesday will be the last opportunity to pay your 1941 Income tax on the government Monthly Plan. This gives you the privilege of paying in twelve monthly instalments without interest, instead of by lump sum in March, 1942.

Here is how to get the monthly payment privilege! Divide the total of your 1940 Income Tax by twelve. This is your first payment - and must be paid to the Receiver General on or before September 30, 1941. You will then pay the same amount before the end of each month for the balance of 1941. When you have estimated your 1941 income tax at the 1941 rate, you will deduct the four payments you will have already made, and pay the remainder in eight equal monthly instalments, starting January, 1942.

The Government offers the above plan as the most reasonable and convenient method of meeting income tax obligations. Ask your local Income Tax Office for Instalment Income Tax Remittance Forms - and any further information you may require.
